North Stars are well-rested

CALGARY (CP) — Minnesota North Stars are banking that a six-day layoff will rejuvenate their lineup tonight in the opening game of their Stanley Cup semifinal series against Calgary Flames.

The North Stars, with seven playoff wins in eight games, hope to have right winger Steve Christoff, left winger Tom Mc Carthy and aggressive forward Jack Carlson back in the lineup in the best-of-seven series.

Christoff, McCarthy and Carlson did not play in the last game of the quarter-final series against Buffalo Sabres, which the North Stars won 4-1 after sweeping Boston Bruins 3-0 in the preliminary round.

LEARNED TO WORK

Nanne thinks the North Stars are much more consistent in the playoffs this season and said Minnesota's five straight wins on the road indicate that Calgary's home-game advantage won't mean much over a long series.

"We've had to learn how to work and win this season with our young team," Nanne said.

"Some people expected us to do much better during the regular season, but our youth and inexperience lost something like 322 man-games with injuries and it broke up the continuity of the team.

"Right now we're playing like we should have been all season long."

Nanne said he was surprised the Flames defeated Philadelphia Flyers 4-1 Sunday in Philadelphia in the seventh game of that quarter-final series.

"Calgary didn't play that well in its own building in the sixth game, but they were much better in Philadelphia in every phase of the game."

CHOICES GOAL

Coach Glen Sonmor won't name his starting netminder until just before game time (9p.m. EDT), when he'll choose between veteran Gilles Meloche and rookie Don Beaupre.

Flames coach Al McNeil is expected to start netminder Pat Riggin, who played spectacularly in Philadelphia on Sunday.

"We're getting good goaltending right now and that's one of the most important aspects of the game in the playoffs," McNeil said.

Veteran centre Bill Clement, a driving force for Calgary in the playoffs with his tenacious checking, was still savoring the goal over his former Philadelphia team-mates.

"It was an added pleasure because the Flyers are a proud, competitive team," Clement said. "The win in the seventh game just makes us believe that much more in ourselves as a group."

The North Stars and Calgary split their four regular-season meetings, each team winning its home games.

TREMENDOUS MOMENT

"This is a tremendous moment in our club history, but we've got to forget Philadelphia and concentrate on Minnesota," said Calgary general manager Cliff Fletcher. "This also is a young club that is in the development stage in the area of team character."

The Flames scored three power-play goals in the deciding game against Philadelphia, surprisingly without much help from scoring leader Kent Nilsson. Guy Chouinard and defenceman Paul Reinhart played key roles in setting up the Calgary power play with three assists each.

"Not many people thought we'd get this far," said Chouinard. "But we won two games in Philadelphia to prove that we can win on the road under the toughest of circumstances."

Calgary captain Brad Marsh summed up the feelings of teammates: "We're Canadian champions right now and we want to go all the way to the top."

STEVE VICKERS
. . . forechecking

Rangers to battle Islanders

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — For two post-season series, New York Rangers have used identical tactics to pull off National Hockey League upsets.

But those tactics might not be all that effective against their local rivals, New York Islanders, in a best-of-seven semifinal which begins here tonight.

The Rangers, 13th-place finishers in the regular season, applied constant pressure to enemy defenceman in upsetting Los Angeles Kings, who were fourth, and the second-place St. Louis Blues. Both team's defensive corps proved vulnerable, allowing many close-range shots and breakaways.

The Islanders' defence, however, is not as error-prone. Though they had the most penalty attack in the NHL this season, it is the defending Stanley Cup champions' defence that most stands out in the playoffs.

"We've beaten the fourth- and second-best teams," said Rangers' left winger Steve Vickers, rejuvenated in the playoffs after spending much of the season on the bench. "Now there is only one team to shoot for: No.1.

"We've been able to take advantage by pressuring the other teams and we have to keep that up against the Islanders. We have to keep the puck away from them."

PLAN TO FORECHECK

The Rangers plan to do that with constant forechecking. But the Islanders' defence of Denis Potvin, Bob Lorimer, Dave Langevin, Ken Morrow, Mike McEwen and Gord Lane usually does not bend under pressure.

Lane is the weakest link but rarely carries the puck. The rest of the defencemen are physical as well as good puck carriers.

Unlike two years ago, when the Rangers shocked the Islanders in a six-game semifinal when the Isles also were regular-season champs, the Islanders no longer have a history of falling short in the playoffs.

They're confident enough this time that they're approaching this series as just another playoff matchup.

"We've proven what kind of club we've got since 1979," said Potvin, who had a fair season but has performed extraordinarily in the playoffs. "We've won the Stanley Cup."

Ferragamo, White sign with Alouettes

Vince Ferragamo, Condredge Holloway, Tom Clements . . . Canadian Football League teams were acquiring prominent quarterbacks Monday as fast as club owners could open their wallets.

The news of Ferragamo's signing by Montreal Alouettes created the biggest stir.

New owner Nelson Skalbania is wasting little time spending money to bring a winner back to Montreal, his first major investment a $400,000-a-year four-year contract to lure Ferragamo from California where he had starred with Los Angeles Rams of the National Football League.

Holloway was acquired by Toronto Argonauts from Ottawa Rough Riders in exchange for tackle Kevin Powell and cash. The Argos then told Holloway's agent they'd rewrite his client's contract to provide a salary increase.

Clements returns to Hamilton Tiger-Cats after an unsuccessful stint in the NFL with Kansas City Chiefs, who received somewhere between $200,000 and $300,000 to release Clements from his NFL contract.

COMPLETES THE DEAL

Besides shelling out for Ferragamo, Skalbania, who completed his purchase of the Alouettes from Sam Berger on Monday, gave team officials the go ahead to sign wide receiver James Scott to a three-year contract.

Terms of that contract with Scott, who played previously with Chicago Bears of the NFL, were not announced.

"I'm glad the suspense is over," Ferragamo said after being introduced to the Montreal media. "Once I finally made up my mind after a long period of soul-searching to make sure that I was making the right decision, I'm now satisfied and eagerly looking forward to a successful future in Canada.

"I'm eager to get to training camp and get started."

Ferragamo, 26, was the second-ranked passer in the NFL's National Conference last season, completing 240 of 404 passes for 3,199 yards and 30 touchdowns. His pass completion percentage of 59.4 was the best in the NFL and he finished with an average gain of 7.9 yards a pass.

Holloway, 28, in Ottawa since 1975, asked to be traded. He missed a quarter of the 1980 season with chest injuries but had 106 pass completions on 187 attempts for a 56.1 percentage and 1,499 yards.

SHARES THE JOB

He had his best season in 1978 when he alternated with Clements and was named an Eastern all-star.

"We're absolutely delighted," said Argo general manager Tom Hudspeth, who had been wooing Don Strock of the NFL's Miami Dolphins. "Condredge was the quarterback we wanted all along."

Holloway is the 22nd quarterback signed by the Argonauts since 1970.

Clements, 27, asked to be traded from Ottawa in 1979 and was dealt to Saskatchewan Roughriders. He was traded to Hamilton in midseason and was selected an all-star after leading the Tiger-Cats to the playoffs. He then tried his luck in the NFL but became tired of warming the bench in Kansas City as a third-stringer.

TOM CLEMENTS

Bob Sprenger, a spokesman for the Chiefs, said Monday the team sold Hamilton the negotiating rights to Clements after Clements cleared NFL waivers Monday.

Under the agreement, Hamilton will pay Kansas City the bonus money it paid Clements when he signed a series of five one-year contracts worth a total of $1 million before last season. The bonus was worth between $200,000 and $300,000.

The fact the player moves all were in the East is significant since that division was regarded last season as a poor cousin to more powerful Western teams, most notably Edmonton Eskimos who have won the national championship the last three years.

By bolstering their offences, the Eastern teams are doing something to improve their product — a vital consideration as the CFL heads towards its 1981 season. Training camps open next month.

A majority of teams lost money at the gate last year and dull games were one of reasons.

"Too many teams were not competitive, games lacked significance and the entertainment value was there in some cases," CFL commissioner Jake Gaudaur admitted last October when asked about flagging ticket sales.

Skalbania's free-spending attitude is fuelled by the philosophy that you have to spend money to make money.

He said he made a serious offer to Hamilton owner Harold Ballard, when the Tiger-Cats held the rights to negotiate with Ferragamo, when he told Ballard: "I'll pay you to sign him so that you can fill my stadium."

TRADES HIS RIGHTS

The Tiger-Cats instead opted to trade the negotiate rights to the Alouettes. For a piece of paper, the defending Eastern champions received running back David Green and wide receiver Keith Baker, a pair of talented veterans.

The fourteen men in the rush to the contract table Monday were Gerry Dattilio, Tony Adams and Dave Marler.

Dattilio led the Alouettes to the Eastern semifinal in a rebuilding year and was the only Canadian quarterback to start as a first-string quarterback in the CFL.

Adams signed a five-year contract before the 1979 season worth about $500,000 but was placed on waivers when Holloway was obtained. He had a few outspoken comments when reached at his home in Kansas City.

"I'm not surprised because the people up there are very insecure about their jobs," said Adams. "I'm not sure that they know what they're doing."

Marler signed a four-year contract with the Tiger-Cats only two weeks ago after winning the starting job as a linebacker over and helping Hamilton to the Grey Cup game in 1980.

"This news is a shocker," Marler said when informed of his team's acquisition of Clements. "I'm still going to try to make it, but, with Tom coming in, there's not much I can do."

Two Lions sign three-year pacts

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two players heading into their option years have signed three-year contracts with B.C. Lions, the Canadian Football League club said Monday.

Back in the fold is defensive end Richard Murray, who started all 16 league games of his first full season with the team and accounted for 10 quarterback sacks.

Murray, 26, who is six feet, two inches and 245 pounds, joined the Lions in the middle of the 1979 season after playing college football at Oklahoma

Steve Kearns, a 6-2, 207-pound tight end-wingback who was formerly on Toronto Argonauts' protected list, is more of a newcomer. The graduate of Liberty Baptist at Lynchburg, Va., played the last five games of the 1980 season for the Lions.

Meanwhile, a club spokesman said the coaching staff will be watching today's National Football League draft as there are possible prospects for training camp which opens next month.

The Lions, who want to take four quarterbacks to camp, are interested in pivots Tom Flick of Washington, Phil Bradley of Missouri and Mike Ford of Tulsa Methodist.

Joe Pao Pao, the Lions' No. 1 quarterback who suffered shoulder and wrist injuries last season when the Lions missed the playoffs despite a winning record, was spelled by Mike Nott and Roy DeWalt while he was on the shelf.

The Lions are also interested in defensive linemen and defensive backs and will be watching to see how high five players who fit into those categories go in the draft.

Rookie pitcher posts fifth win

World Series atmosphere gripped Dodger Stadium in Los Angeles: Fans began arriving three hours before the game and more than 100 reporters and photographers were on hand to see the first start of the rookie left-hander, while all this was going on Monday night?

"He's getting up for the game, all right," said Dodger shortstop Bill Russell. "He's in there on the trainer's table, sound asleep."

Valenzuela, 20, was wide awake a little later as he continued his incredible performance on the mound and at the plate. Valenzuela shut out San Francisco Giants 5-0, allowing seven hits.

In the only other National League game, the Phillies trimmed Montreal Expos 3-1 in Philadelphia.

Valenzuela has started five games in his major league career and won them all — four via shutout and in 45 innings this year has allowed only one earned run.

His latest win lowered his earned-run average to 0.20. With his third straight shutout, he has a string of 28 1-3 scoreless innings.

"Webster has no words to define him," said Los Angeles second baseman Dave Lopes, who helped preserve Valenzuela's latest shutout with a running, over-the-shoulder catch of a fly ball in the second inning when the Giants had runners at first and third and nobody out.

The crowd of 49,478 accorded Valenzuela numerous standing ovations, on the mound as he struck out one batter after another, and at the plate where he collected three of the Dodgers' 11 hits and also knocked in the game's first run.

"He owns the city right now," said Lopes. "He's a super kid and a great pitcher."

San Francisco manager Frank Robinson, referring to Valenzuela's darting screwball, said, "He throws a pitch you don't see too often, and when you do see it, you don't know what to do with it."

Afterward, Valenzuela, through an interpreter, said: "I feel great. No, I wasn't tired. I went to my screwball more toward the end of the game."

On his hitting (he's batting .438 for the season with seven hits in 16 at-bats), Valenzuela laughed and said, "No, I've never been a good hitter. But I like to hit and I try to hit well."

He singled in the third inning but eventually was thrown out at the plate after Ken Landreaux had singled to centre field.

Phillies 3 Expos 1

Mike Ruthven tripled home one run and scored himself in the first inning to pace Philadelphia over Montreal and snap the Expos' six-game winning streak.

Right-hander Dick Ruthven pitched a four-hitter for his third victory in four decisions as the Phillies extended their winning streak to four. Bill Gullickson, 1-1, who pitched six innings and allowed just five hits, was the loser.

Baylor propels Angels past A's

The way April has been going for Don Baylor, he'll take any kind of a hard-hit ball — even if it does result in a triple play.

Of course, he felt much better hitting a home run as well Monday night.

"I've just been playing to get in a frame of mind where I could take the ball good," he said after leading California Angels to a 3-2 victory over the red-hot Oakland A's. "I haven't been able to do it all spring, but tonight I've had four good at-bats."

One of Baylor's four hard hit balls was turned into a triple play in the sixth inning by the A's, thrilling a half-price night crowd of 41,760 at the Oakland Coliseum. But earlier, Baylor — who went into the game batting .058 — also had a sacrifice fly for his first RBI of the season and a tie-breaking home run.

"That's the first time this season he's swung the bat like I know he can swing the bat," California manager Jim Fregosi said of Baylor, the American League MVP two years ago.

In other AL action, it was: Baltimore 5 Chicago 2, Seattle 8 Minnesota 3 in 10 innings, Texas 10 Boston 9, New York 3 Detroit 1, and Milwaukee 4 Toronto 3 in 12 innings.

Baylor's sacrifice fly came in the second inning and his homer in the fourth to break a 2-2 tie.

Right-hander Ken Forsch, 3-0, pitched a three-hitter to stop a six-game Oakland winning streak. At 17-2, the A's are one victory short of the major league record for most victories in April.

Steve McCatty, 3-1, was the loser, but pitched his fourth complete game and the 16th of his career for the A's staff.

Orioles 5 Chisox 2

Red-hot Ken Singleton rapped four hits and drove in the winning run as Baltimore beat Chicago and snapped a six-game winning streak for the White Sox.

Scott McGregor, 1-1, scattered 11 hits before needing relief help from Tippy Martinez in the ninth.

Singleton's four hits gave him eight hits in eight consecutive at-bats over two games. He had two singles and two doubles and raised his batting average to .512 with 21 hits in 41 at-bats.

Mariners 8 Twins 3

Lenny Randle capped a five-run 10th inning with a grand slam homer to lift Seattle over Minnesota. Earlier in the inning, Dan Meyer had delivered the tie-breaking run with a single.

Rangers 10 Red Sox 0

Buddy Bell smacked a two-run homer in the first inning and Texas added four more runs in a sixth-inning outburst.
